

America's Water Security

What do climate variations, an aging infrastructure, deferred maintenance, insufficient investment, cropping patterns that are influenced by agricultural subsidies, and ineffective application of environmental and drinking water safety regulations portend for America's Water Security? Will these issues constrain our future economic growth or deepen economic and social inequalities? Is the academic community leading the thinking on how to address these structural challenges, or even raising the right questions?